RISES FROM FACTORY TO MINISTRY, 6 ASSISTANTS DO WORK

A writer has been commissioned to write a Soviet-type novel about the life of Zoltan Kak, much-publicized Stakhanovite youth worker who has been held up constantly to the people, on the occasions of production pledges and worker competitions as an example. A fellow shop-worker gives the following story of Kek's work:

Kek is now 30 years old, and for years has been a most conscientious party agitator. He was designated a Stakhanovite by the party. He worked two machines, and had six assistant workers assigned to him. He was entrusted with the simplest lathe work, that of turning brake drums. He, himself, did nothing but supervise and nurry the work of the six assistants.

The assistants received 120 forints per week in wages, and at the direction of the perty, their production was credited to Kek, boosting his pay to over 1,500 forints. In recognition of Kek's achievements on behalf of the party, and of his leadership ability, he was appointed to an important post in the Ministry of Heavy Thoustry.
